Stern Gang Ends Truce With British

Jewish Outfit Believed Trying To Emphasize London's Weakness

JERUSALEM, May 4—The Jewish Stern Gang announced cessation of their truce with the British in Palestine today.

A statement issued in Tel Aviv said:

"Our direct war against the British enemy will be renewed."

The communiqué, regarded as a reply to arrival of British reinforcements in the Holy Land, said the aim of the Sternists will be to prove British inability to maintain law and order.

Jewish sources said that Arab legion tanks and artillery are pounding four Zionist settlements in the Hebron hills, south of Jerusalem.

The community of Kfar Etzion, midway between Jerusalem and Hebron, was reported severely damaged by a heavy artillery barrage.

Jews said a counterattack by Haganah militiamen was expected momentarily.

THE ARABS were said to be occupying an abandoned Russian monastery near Kfar Etzion, from where they were launching their attacks.

An unconfirmed report said that a Haganah plane had dropped 25-pound anti-personnel bombs on Arab formations.

The Haganah radio reported that another Lebanese regular army force had crossed into Palestine on the extreme north-eastern frontier.

The troops were said to be equipped with light artillery.

Haganah reported similar Lebanese troop infiltrations in this general area last Saturday.

A high-level British spokesman meanwhile said there is a mounting possibility that large-scale fighting may not occur in the Holy Land even when the British mandate ends.

He said that confidence is growing in government quarters that there will be a truce, not only for Jerusalem but for all of Palestine.

British administration officials anticipate the speedy arrival of a governor-general for Palestine named by the United Nations.

Previously, the Arabs were reported to have minded the Jerusalem-Hebron highway outside Bethlehem while their forces closed in around the settlement.

Accounts of the attack were received as semi-official sources said British authorities still in Jerusalem are hopeful that a general truce in the Holy City can be announced at "any moment now."

House Panel OKs Bill To Secure FBI Information

WASHINGTON, May 4—The House rules committee took action today to pass a law compelling President Truman to turn over confidential FBI data on the loyalty of Atomic Scientist Edward U. Condon.

The committee approved a resolution directing cabinet officers and the heads of other government agencies to furnish congressional committees with confidential data upon request.

The action cleared the way for House consideration of the measure. Speaker Martin, (R) Mass., has predicted its approval by an overwhelming majority.

Rep. Hoffman, sponsor of the resolution, said that penalties provided under the measure for unauthorized disclosure of such government information would apply to newsmen. He declared: "If any member of the press wants to snoop around and publish something that is detrimental to the welfare of the country, there's no reason why he shouldn't be punished."

The new move came in the wake of a rebuff handed the House last month by the Commerce department, acting under orders of President Truman.

Agency Reports Spaak To Quit

LONDON, May 4—Reuters reported from Brussels today that Belgian Premier Paul-Henri Spaak has decided to resign.

The news agency said that it had learned "authoritatively" that Spaak intended to notify Prince Charles, the Belgian regent, that he and his government will step down.

Reuters said that Spaak decided to quit because of a dispute involving state-sponsored and church-supported schools.

VOTERS FLOCK TO POLLS

Oleo Compromise Try Fails

WASHINGTON, May 4—Compromise efforts of butter and margarine interests collapsed today, sending the issue of repealing federal oleo taxes to a preliminary showdown on the Senate floor this afternoon.

The first Senate round on the House-passed measure centered about the technical question of whether the bill should go direct to the calendar, and thus be ready for floor action, or whether it should be sent to the agriculture or finance committees for possible hearings.

Putting the measure on the calendar would be only a tentative victory for senators from regions producing ingredients for margarine, since a move to take it off the calendar and send it to a committee is certain.

The real issue is whether it will go eventually to the agriculture committee, which dairy state senators hope would vote to retain the margarine tax, or the finance committee, in which Southern senators, from the vegetable oil region, hope would report a bill more favorable to them.

Compromise efforts broke down when dairy-state senators refused to consider any compromise that would not involve sending the bill to the agriculture group.

Sen. Aiken, (R) Vt., an agriculture committee member and a dairy-state senator, called "margarine state" senators into a conference. He offered a plan whereby his group would not oppose margarine too strenuously if provisions were enacted to require the "identification" of margarine when served in public places.

Sen. Fulbright, (D) Ark., spearheading the "oleomargarine" group, turned down Aiken's proposal. He is confident of votes to repeal the tax without concessions to the dairy group.

Aiken announced later that the group failed to reach an agreement as to which committee should get the measure, but indictated that in any event he and three other agriculture committee senators stand ready to compromise on details of the bill.

He said, however, that they would insist that the agriculture committee handle the bill.

The agriculture committee claimed jurisdiction because, Aiken declared, "this is simply and purely a regulatory measure." Fulbright claimed jurisdiction for the finance committee because, he said, the existing oleo tax law is "for raising revenue."

Taft-Stassen Tiff Draws Ballots

The largest turnout since 1938 was indicated by noon Tuesday as Pickaway Countians, as well as fellow citizens throughout Ohio, flocked to the polls for the primary election.

Although the nation eyed Ohio's Tuesday ballot with more than ordinary interest as the result of the Taft-Stassen battle, local voters were content to take a part in lesser tiffs, such as the nomination of candidates for governor and for the county commissioners.

Pickaway Countians were forced to the sidelines in the battle between Ohio's favorite son for the presidency, Sen. Robert A. Taft and former Minnesota Governor Harold Stassen.

There were no delegates for Stassen on the Pickaway ballot—except one. He is Carrington Marshall of Columbus, listed as However, Stassen entered no direct candidate in this congressional district. Thus, local voters who were more impressed by the Minnesota candidate than by the senior senator from Ohio, had to content themselves with the "single-shot" Marshall.

MORE THAN 600 Circleville voters had cast their ballots by noon Tuesday.

Local election officials said that the "turnout is fair so far. We expect a far greater number of voters in late afternoon."

All Circleville precincts except one showed that Democrats were coming out in greater numbers than were the Republicans. The one exception was Precinct A in Ward Three where 30 from each party had voted up until noon.

Tabulation by precincts and listings of the number of Democrat and Republican ballots cast follows:

First Ward, A—25 D, 17 R; B—65 D, 13 R; C—25 D, 17 R; D—21 D, 6 R; E—not available.

Fourth Ward, A—20 D, 16 R; B—34 D, 8 R; C—39 D, 13 R; Circleville Township, 20 D, 9 R.

While higher level politicians battle for nomination for state and federal posts, much of Pickaway County's interest is centered around local nominations for Congress, two seats for county commissioners. (Continued on Page Two)

Fire Chief Tells Kindergarten Lad Of Cow's Spigots

The children of Circleville's first kindergarten, under the direction of Miss Marjorie Bowman, their instructor, conducted an inspection of the city's fire house Monday morning and afternoon.

After showing the kiddies around the building and letting them see the various pieces of equipment with which the firemen douse their fires, Fire Chief Talmer Wise asked the children if there were any questions they wished to ask.

One child, taking the chief at his word, shot up his arm and asked the boss fireman, "Can you milk a cow?"

Wise did a double-take on that one, kept a straight and serious face, and told the youngster that he could.

"How?" said the youngster. "I just turn on the two rear spigots and let the milk drain out," answered the chief. "How do you do it?"

"Same way, I guess," admitted the lad.

6 Indicted By Jury

6 Cases Ignored By Grand Panel

In a one-day session, Pickaway County May term of grand jury Monday returned seven true bills, ignored six cases and examined 29 witnesses which were summoned to give testimony before the 15-member panel.

Arraignment for the six persons who were indicted was set for Thursday morning.

At their noon inspection of the county jail, grand jury members found no recommendations to make to the court.

The bills were returned against the following:

Robert C. Lilly, 27, was indicted on two counts of drawing a check with insufficient funds and obtaining property under false pretenses. He was accused of passing an $1,850 bad check at the Clifton Motor Sales for the purchase of an automobile.

Indicted for keeping a gambling room, J. Corbett Martin of Derby was retained under $500 bond. He was arrested April 3 when he appeared in court to pay the fine of another man, William Millions, who had been apprehended for operating a game of chance.

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Democratic headquarters quotes astrologers as saying that Taft was born too late in the afternoon to be President. Apparently just missed the noon planet for the White House.

Republicans feel that any of their candidates was born under a lucky star to be running this year but according to the charts, Truman can't miss if we play our horoscopes right.

Eisenhower was born under five stars but is not inclined to run. He doesn't believe in giving up a good steady job for four terms in the White House.

There was a time a man could hope to escape in eight years but due to popular eagerness that was changed.

Anyway not everything depends on our election. Danish scientists are going right ahead with plans to develop a potato with a tomato skin.

This sounds like a mad idea until you think what people have been trying to do with their faces.

House Whip Says Senate Angle Hurts Draft Bill

WASHINGTON, May 4—House GOP White Arends, (R) Ill., warned today that inclusion of the Senate's military training plan in a draft bill would "endanger" the manpower legislation.

Arends predicted that Congress will accept a peace-time draft but "won't take both" the draft and any form of Universal Military Training.

His statement was made as the Senate armed services committee began work on a polished version of its draft-training bill—24 hours in advance of an important GOP policy meeting.

Unlike the straight two-year draft bill reported by the House armed services committee the Senate plan also calls for giving 18-year-olds one year of training in the armed forces. Youths 19 through 25 would be liable for two years regular service, as in the House bill.

ARENDS, a member of the House committee which voted 28 to 5 for the draft, threw cold water on a tentative UMT amendment being considered by

Gas Explosion Kills Man, Hurts 8 In New York

NEW YORK, May 4—One man was killed today and eight persons were injured, two critically, by a terrific explosion of illuminating gas that made a shambles of an entire block in Flushing, Queens.

The blast, shortly before 10 a. m., totally destroyed two adjoining two-story houses.

It caved in the side of the next house, and severely damaged eight other houses.

Flying bricks and other debris smashed windows in the entire neighborhood, wrecked two cars parked nearby, toppled household furniture and shattered venetian blinds.

The roar of the blast, caused when a piano being moved into one of the houses broke a gas connection, was heard for miles.

Frank Lancini, 42, a piano mover was killed by flying bricks. He was outside the house at the time. Those injured also were outside.

British Move In UN Labeled As Surprise

LAKE SUCCESS, May 4—Britain's surprise proposal for a "neutral authority" to administer Palestine still left unsolved today the question of who will do the ruling.

In any event, British Colonial Secretary Arthur Creech Jones' statement to the General Assembly is regarded as the coup-de-grace to the United States' trusteeship proposal.

Delegates are not clear as to just how Britain has in mind to administer the Holy Land after May 16, when the British mandate will be surrendered.

Drastic Cut In Output Of Meat Feared

Independents May Join Walkout

CHICAGO, May 4—The nation faced a drastic cut in meat production today as the CIO Packinghouse Workers announced plans to broaden their eight-week strike and call out 50,000 workers in 50 independent slaughter houses.

Ralph Helstein, president of the striking United Packinghouse Workers union, declared the move was made because the independent plants "were assisting the big four packers (Swift, Armour, Cudahy and Wilson) in breaking the nearly two-months old strike."

Since the strike over wages was called last March 16, independent plants have stepped up their production, and the nation scarcely has felt the effects of the walkout involving approximately 100,000 workers.

The latest U. S. Department of Agriculture survey showed the nation's meat production to be only 10 percent below that of a year ago.

Thus a strike in the independent plants would cut off a large section of the nation's production, leaving only unorganized and AFL plants in operation.

THE UNION originally demanded a wage increase of 29 cents an hour but agreed to accept the packers' offer of a 9-cent hourly raise on the condition that the remaining 20 cents be submitted to arbitration. This proposal was rejected by the packers, and the strike was called.

A presidential fact finding board investigated the strike and reported it found the 9-cent hourly raise, which previously (Continued on Page Two)

Speed Of OKs To Tell Worth Of Bogota Meet

WASHINGTON, May 4—The speed with which Latin-American countries ratify the new pact strengthening the Inter-American system is expected to indicate whether the Bogota conference was a success.

The pact, signed Friday in the Colombian capital, establishes a regional system for the Western Hemisphere within the framework of the United Nations. In many respects it is designed to solve Inter-American problems without recourse to the world organization.

To become effective 14 nations of the 21 within the hemisphere must officially ratify the new arrangement, which supplants the Pan-American Union.

While all 21 powers signed the treaty at Bogota, observers who were present at the meeting are doubtful that there will be immediate and wholehearted endorsement or ratification by the home governments.

Last Ditch Efforts Made To Avert Railroad Strike

CHICAGO, May 4—Government mediators held out little hope today for settlement of a threatened railroad strike on May 11, but the White House said there is still hope of achieving a settlement.

Presidential Secretary Charles Ross said the White House planned to take no action because there is hope of a settlement.

The first of two conferences scheduled for today by Frank Douglass, chairman of the National Railway Mediation Board, opened at the union station in Chicago with a 15-man committee representing 132 Class I railroads.

Circleville's seven-man planning commission Tuesday night is scheduled to make its first report to city council on needs to be met before the board can take any effective action toward setting up proposed building regulations in the city.

James Yost, citizens' chairman of the board, said the commission held a meeting Monday to outline preliminary plans to be presented to council.

While the commission's main purpose of the meeting was to lay out a program for Tuesday's council meeting, Yost and Mayor Thurman I. Miller, president ex-officio, said the group will press the city solons for "nominal operating expenses."

Both agreed incidental expenses incurred in carrying out the zoning plan should not come out of individual pocket-books since the commission was authorized by council and work will be done for the city.

Second on council's agenda is a plan by the Circleville Child Study Club to purchase "Old Bessie", the city's outmoded firetruck, and station it in the kiddie's section of Ted Lewis park.

A delegation of women is expected to appear before council and ask that their club's bid be accepted in the face of a "progressive civic program."

Usable scrap from the truck will be turned over to the city for sale as was stated in the original resolution passed last meeting by council, the club agreed.

The three operating unions issued their strike call last week after rejecting a presidential fact finding board's recommendation for a 15-1/2 cent an hour wage increase and certain changes in working rules. Fire Chief Tells Kindergarten Lad Of Cow's Spigots

The children of Circleville's first kindergarten, under the direction of Miss Marjorie Bowman, their instructor, conducted an inspection of the city's fire house Monday morning and afternoon.

After showing the kiddies around the building and letting them see the various pieces of equipment with which the firemen drown their fires, Fire Chief Talmer Wise asked the children if there were any questions they wished to ask.

One child, taking the chief at his word, shot up his arm and asked the boss fireman, "Can you milk a cow?"

Wise did a double-take on that one, kept a straight and serious face, and told the youngster that he could.

"How?" said the youngster. "I just turn on the two rear spigots and let the milk drain out," answered the chief. "How do you do it?"

"Same way, I guess," admitted the lad.

6 Cases Ignored By Grand Panel

In a one-day session, Pickaway County May term of grand jury Monday returned seven true bills, ignored six cases and examined 29 witnesses which were summoned to give testimony before the 15-member panel.

Arraignment for the six persons who were indicted was set for Thursday morning.

At their noon inspection of the county jail, grand jury members found no recommendations to make to the court.

True bills were returned against the following:

Robert C. Lilly, 27, was indicted on two counts of drawing a check with insufficient funds and obtaining property under false pretenses. He was accused of passing an $1,850 bad check at the Clifton Motor Sales for the purchase of an automobile.

Indicted for keeping a gambling room, J. Corbett Martin of Derby was retained under $500 bond. He was arrested April 3 when he appeared in court to pay the fine of another man, William Milliron, who had been apprehended for operating a game of chance.

A LAST-MINUTE change in the jury docket saw Robert L. Kirsch, 23, of Huntington, W. Va., indicted for grand larceny. Kirsch, under $500 bond, was released to Huntington authorities to face a grand larceny indictment in West Virginia. He was accused here of (Continued on Page Two)

ONE MAN'S OPINION

Democratic headquarters quotes astrologers as saying that Taft was born too late in the afternoon to be President. Apparently just missed the noon planet for the White House.

Republicans feel that any of their candidates was born under a lucky star to be running this year but according to the charts, Truman can't miss if we play our horoscopes right.

Eisenhower was born under five stars but is not inclined to run. He doesn't believe in giving up a good steady job for four terms in the White House.

There was a time a man could hope to escape in eight years but due to popular eagerness that was changed.

Anyway not everything depends on our election. Danish scientists are going right ahead with plans to develop a potato with a tomato skin.

This sounds like a mad idea until you think what people have been trying to do with their faces.

ty commissioner and the sheriff's office.

On the Republican ticket, Walter Brehm, incumbent, is opposed by Ralph Terrell while the Democrat ballot lists Rex Ed Haeccker against Joseph Allen in the fight for nominations to Congress.

Four Democrats and four Republicans are vying for two seats to be vacated by county commissioners. In the political ring for the commissioners' office are John Keller, incumbent, Clarence Helvering, William J. Goode and Milton P. Manson, all Democrats.

Entered on the Republican ticket are Harry T. Roese, Ross Straley, Fred Moeller and Richard Hedges.

Two candidates for nomination on the Democratic ballot for sheriff are Charles H. Radcliff, incumbent, and his opposition, Ralph Wallace.

The unprecedented battle by Stassen for 23 of the state's 53 Republican presidential delegates was believed responsible for the good turnout elsewhere in the state. Officials in Columbus predicted that 1,200,000 ballots may be cast before the polls close 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

SHARING interest with the presidential battle was the state fight between Former Gov. Frank J. Lausche and another Cleveland, Former Mayor Ray T. Miller, for the Democratic nomination for governor.

The winner will face Gov. Thomas J. Herbert, Republican, in November. Herbert has only minor opposition and is certain of re-nomination.

The voters — 650,000 Republicans, 550,000 Democrats — were to get their party ballots at 9,385 balloting places in the state. They will nominate candidates for six state offices, congressmen-at-large, 22 district congressmen, three supreme court judgeships and many county offices.

They also will actually elect members of the county and state party central committees.

On the state ticket are 40 candidates, 19 Republicans and 21 Democrats, contesting for 20 nominations. Only one candidate — Republican Supreme Court Judge James Garfield Stewart — has no opposition in either party.

Ohio will send 53 delegates to the national convention in Philadelphia on June 21. At least 30 go to Taft uncontested. The Minnesotan has entered two candidates in each of 11 congressional districts — mostly in industrial areas — and one candidate against Taft's complete slate of nine candidates for delegate-at-large.

Followers of Stassen, spectacular winner of the Wisconsin, Nebraska and Pennsylvania primaries, predicted in Cleveland that he would win 15 to 20 of the 23 contested races.

Taft, home in Cincinnati, was equally optimistic. He refused to concede a single district race, although he did admit that the "single-shot" Stassen candidate for delegate-at-large (Marshall) was a "gamble."

Most impartial observers, sifting the predictions as well as they could, hung up the figure "ten" to shoot at. If Stassen wins ten or more delegates, they believe it's another Stassen victory.

But, if Taft holds the 41-year-old former naval captain to nine or less, the consensus would be that the balloting definitely favored the Ohioan.

ON THE STATE ticket, the emphasis is on the Miller-Lausche embroglio.

Miller, backed by the CIO and most party chieftains, wants the Democratic nomination for governor and is relying on organization support to get it.

Lausche, who wants the same thing, is again appealing to the "independent" voters. If the vote reaches anything like the expected 550,000 in the Democratic party, most observers believe Lausche will win.

Miller's chances, however, increase if the size of the vote decreases.

There are two other Democratic gubernatorial candidates, Robert S. Cox, of Millersburg and Joseph Torok Jr., of Youngstown, but they do not figure in the betting.

On the Republican side, Governor Herbert has opposition in his bid for re-nomination from Albert E. Payne of Springfield, and William L. White of Newark, but is considered certain to be an overwhelming winner.

William L. Leisure of Bloomingsburg was indicted for non-support of his three-year-old son. He was under $500 bond in Magistrate H. O. Eveland's court.

The grand jury ignored three counts against Merle Ankrom of 141 York street who was accused of wilfully poisoning his neighbors' dogs.

Second degree manslaughter counts, which had been filed against Patrick Smille, 22, of Jefferson, Wis., and Richard J. Funk, 27, of Columbus, also were ignored.

Also dismissed was the case against Clair E. Hyer, 21, of Clarksville. Hyer was returned to Ft. Hayes military control from where he was AWOL. He had been accused of assaulting his wife with intent to rob her of her car.

THE NON-SUPPORT case against Worley Funk of New Holland also was dismissed. Funk had been accused of failing to support his 11 minor children.

Desperate triggermen held at Athlith are believed sworn to "get" High Commissioner Lt. Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham and Sir Henry Gurney, chief secretary of the Palestine government.

Arson, Death Combined In Weird Holdup

CINCINNATI, May 4—A story of robbery, arson and death was unfolded today in the west end section of Cincinnati.

Police said the swift course of events last night was climaxed with the death of a two-year-old child and the critical burning of his parents.

The victim was George Cannon Jr., who died when his home was set afire.

Authorities said George Williams, 50-year-old shoe shine boy, knocked on the Cannon's door and grabbed $250 from Mrs. Cannon, 38, who was holding the money in her hands when she answered the knock.

They stated Cannon came out shooting when his wife screamed and wounded her when one of the shots went wild.

Meanwhile, Williams spread gasoline on the Cannon's floor, lit it and fled from the scene with his shoes ablaze. He is still being sought.

Cannon, who is 50 and owns a barbershop, had third-degree burns about the body, face and hands. His wife had second and third-degree burns of the body.

MacArthur Warns Japs Of Forces Of Depotism

TOKYO, May 4—General MacArthur warned the Japanese today to be vigilant in defense of Democracy against "the forces of despotism" now "on the march in every land."

Without naming Russia, Gen. MacArthur declared: "The issues are clearly defined as between Democracy and despotism—freedom and slavery."

His statement, a message to the Japanese on the first anniversary of the framing of their constitution, highlighted celebrations lead by Emperor Hirohito.

The emperor mounted a golden throne in the upper house of the diet (parliament) to preside over a lavish 15-minute ceremony honoring the year-old constitution which stripped Hirohito of his political power.

His imperial majesty walked up red-carpeted stairs, placed his high silk hat on a table beside the throne and sat stiffly at attention while the prime minister and other government dignitaries delivered brief speeches.

The Allied section of the visitors' gallery was partially empty. There were no high ranking Allied officials, as there had been last year when the constitution was promulgated.

In Washington, Cyrus Ching, director of the government's Mediation and Conciliation Service, will meet with Helstein today. Regarding the Washington conference, Helstein said the union "would consider" a move by the packing industry to lower meat prices if wage raises were limited to 9 cents an hour.

The big packers, meanwhile, claimed their back-to-work movements at their struck plants was "a success," but the union countered by terming them "a flop."

Most of the countries had come to the conference with economic problems and especially United States aid in their minds. All they received was a promise of another meeting next Fall on economic aid.

stealing a trumpet from the high school.

A larceny and breaking and entering indictment was returned against Emerson Cain, 19, of Pickaway Township. The youth was under $1,000 accused of burglarizing the home of Edward Kreisel.

William L. Leisure of Bloomingsburg was indicted for non-support of his three-year-old son. He was under $500 bond in Magistrate H. O. Eveland's court.

For driving a motor vehicle without an operator's permit, the grand jury indicted Edna Tye of Columbus. She was awaiting jury action under $100 bond.

The grand jury ignored three counts against Merle Ankrom of 141 York street who was accused of willfully poisoning his neighbors' dogs.

Second degree manslaughter counts, which had been filed against Patrick Smilie, 22, of Jefferson, Wis., and Richard J. Funk, 27, of Columbus, also were ignored.

Also dismissed was the case against Clair E. Hyer, 21, of Clarksville. Hyer was returned to Ft. Hayes military control from where he was AWOL. He had been accused of assaulting his wife with intent to rob her of her car.

THE NON-SUPPORT case against Worley Funk of New Holland also was dismissed. Funk had been accused of failing to support his 11 minor children.

Members of the grand jury were:

Ray Hardin, Cecil Caudy, Mrs. Christal Green, Medrith Gosard, Mrs. Frances Neff, Mrs. Frances Dount, Charles Hosler, Charles Owens, Alice Walters, N. E. Reichelderfer, Cecil Reid, Mary Mack, Edward Shanton, William Fisher and C. E. Lemon.

British Move In UN Labeled As Surprise

favor an authority—whether a commission or a governor-general—fully responsible to the UN.

British quarters, on the other hand have indicated that they would prefer a high commissioner outside of UN authority. This would presumably leave Britain in a position of influence in the Holy Land even though her mandate expired.

The British proposal is expected to draw American support, even though it side-tracks the trusteeship plan.

Clews Lacking In Club Holdup

NILES, May 4—Niles police worked on scant clues today in their search for seven men who held up and robbed some 35 patrons at the Jennings night club of between $5,000 and $6,000.

The seven bandits, armed with pistols and sawed off shotguns, walked into the night spot early yesterday, lined up the patrons, and took the cash from the men. The women patrons were not searched.

Air Scouts Meet

Air Scout Squadron No. 84 met Monday evening at the Elsea and Harmon airfield, north of Circleville. The group heard a series of reports from its members which included observer requirements, propellers, elements of ariology and maps.

that today's sessions would bring some compromise on the changes sought in working rules. He declared:

"We are still trying to get a compromise on rules changes. I am convinced there is no hope of compromise on the money issue."

Earlier yesterday, Douglass said the unions "might be willing to go along" on the 15 1/2-cent hourly wage raise if the board got a "different disposition" regarding rule changes.

safer, special precautions were enforced to guard their lives.

In this connection it was disclosed that 400 Jewish convicts, principally "priority political offenders", are being kept under close guard at the Athlith prison camp.

The Jews continue to be held although the majority of former Arab prisoners, including many who escaped from the Acre jail and Latrun detention camp, now are freed.

Desperate triggermen held at Athlith are believed sworn to "get" High Commissioner Lt. Gen. Sir Alan Cunningham and Sir Henry Gurney, chief secretary of the Palestine government.

These prisoners, and some 350 to 400 others held at the Gilgit camp, Kenya Colony, will remain in British custody until the high commissioner and others are safely out of Palestine after May 15.

Arson, Death Combined In Weird Holdup

CINCINNATI, May 4—A story of robbery, arson and death was unfolded today in the west end section of Cincinnati.

Police said the swift course of events last night was climaxed with the death of a two-year-old child and the critical burning of his parents.

The victim was George Cannon Jr., who died when his home was set afire.

Authorities said George Williams, 50-year-old shoeshine boy, knocked on the Cannon's door and grabbed $250 from Mrs. Cannon, 38, who was holding the money in her hands when she answered the knock.

They stated Cannon came out shooting when his wife screamed and wounded her when one of the shots went wild.

Meanwhile, Williams spread gasoline on the Cannon's floor, lit it and fled from the scene with his shoes ablaze. He is still being sought.

Cannon, who is 50 and owns a barbershop, had third-degree burns about the body, face and hands. His wife had second and third-degree burns of the body.

MacArthur Warns Japs Of Forces Of Depotism

TOKYO, May 4—General MacArthur warned the Japanese today to be vigilant in defense of Democracy against "the forces of despotism" now "on the march in every land."

Without naming Russia, Gen. MacArthur declared: "The issues are clearly defined as between Democracy and despotism—freedom and slavery."

His statement, a message to the Japanese on the first anniversary of the framing of their constitution, highlighted celebrations lead by Emperor Hirohito.

The emperor mounted a golden throne in the upper house of the diet (parliament) to preside over a lavish 15-minute ceremony honoring the year-old constitution which stripped Hirohito of his political power.

His imperial majesty walked up red-carpeted stairs, placed his high silk hat on a table beside the throne and sat stiffly at attention while the prime minister and other government dignitaries delivered brief speeches.

The Allied section of the visitors' gallery was partially empty. There were no high ranking Allied officials, as there had been last year when the constitution was promulgated.

Friends may call after 4 p. m. Wednesday.

He is survived by three sisters, Ida J. McCorkle of Circleville, Laura Brundige of Columbus and Katherine Brundige of Kingston; and two brothers, Arthur of Kingston and Fred of Florida.

Funeral services will be conducted at 3 p. m. Thursday in the Hill funeral home, Kingston, with the Rev. Leonard Mann officiating. Burial will be made in Prairie View cemetery, Whisler.

Friends are asked to omit flowers, may call at the funeral home after 2 p. m. Wednesday.

ROLAND WOODS

Roland Woods, a former Pickaway County resident, died at 11 a. m. Monday on his 98th birthday in the home of a son, William Woods, in Columbus.

Surviving are six sons, George of Washington C. H., James of Columbus, Kan., John of Bainbridge, Homer of Williamsport, Edward of Washington C. H. and William.

One daughter also survives. She is Mrs. Rebecca Mill of Columbus. Mr. Woods' wife, Susie Bell James, preceded him in death in 1914.

The body was removed to the C. E. Hill funeral home in Williamsport to await completion of funeral arrangements.

or "training" as defined in the tentative bill, said he wants to see farm labor, and all college students taking engineering or scientific courses deferred from the draft.

Wilson said he also wants to provide that two-year enlistees would get GI benefits. But before approving any draft bill, he proposes other legislation to raise the pay of the armed forces as a means of trying to increase volunteer recruitment and escape the draft.

The House draft bill calls for registration of youths 18 through 30. The Senate measure would register all youths 18 through 25, confining the registration to the pool liable for actual induction.

Helstein declared the move to call out the independent plant workers could not be considered a secondary boycott which is banned under the Taft-Hartley Act. He said:

"The union's national strike strategy committee has given that authorization to those local unions whose contracts are open for wage negotiations and are in legal position to strike."

In Washington, Cyrus Ching, director of the government's Mediation and Conciliation Service, will meet with Helstein today.

Regarding the Washington conference, Helstein said the union "would consider" a move by the packing industry to lower meat prices if wage raises were limited to 9 cents an hour.

The big packers, meanwhile, claimed their back-to-work movements at their struck plants was "a success," but the union countered by terming them "a flop."

a part of the work for which the Bogota meeting was called. It was, in fact, drafted as the principle project of the meeting only after bloody revolution threatened to wreck the conference entirely.

In substance it became primarily a gesture of defiance of the Communist instigators of the revolutionary plot. It was drafted hurriedly and with many compromises in order to permit delegates to leave the wrecked Colombian capital.

Most of the countries had come to the conference with economic problems and especially United States aid in their minds. All they received was a promise of another meeting next Fall on economic aid.

AMANDA WORKER Accused After Cutting Scrape

Ralph W. Young, 59-year-old laborer from Amanda, was bound over to the Pickaway County grand jury in mayor's court Tuesday morning on an affidavit signed by John Christy of Lancaster.

Christy said Young cut and stabbed him in a West Main street cafe with a broken beer bottle about 12:30 a. m. Tuesday. Young's bond was fixed at $500 by Mayor Thurman I. Miller.

Christy, whose face was patched up with adhesive plaster and bandages when he appeared before the court, said he had been sitting at the bar in the cafe when he was attacked by Young.

In addition to being bound over to the grand jury, Young paid a $25 and costs fine for drunk and disorderly conduct.

Young was in city jail Tuesday for failure to post the $500 bond.

U.S. LEADERS NEGLIGENT?

Writer Gives Indictment On Palestine Situation

BY KENNETH L. DIXON
WASHINGTON, May 4—This is what they call a "John Doe indictment."

That is, it merely sets forth the evidence and the charges of the crime or crimes committed—leaving the naming and accusing of actual individuals until later.

This is the indictment: That certain British and American leaders have been either, (1) guilty of deliberately misleading their peoples on the facts of the Palestine situation, or, (2) unbelievably negligent in the gathering and evaluating of information about that situation. This is the crime charged:

THAT, AS a direct or indirect result, thousands have been unnecessarily slain in the Holy Land, and the situation there remains bloodily unsettled to-day, which could involve the world in another war.

This is the evidence: During a period of approximately one month, from early February to early March of this year, this correspondent was in Palestine, talking to Jews, Arabs and British, and various other nations not involved directly in the situation. Also, he was using his own two eyes and ears in normal newsgathering fashion.

In a series of stories, written during that time and in mid-March, I listed the following seemingly obvious conclusions:

1—That the Jews did not need the British soldiers to "protect" them from the Arabs. Actually, they were far safer where British troops did not operate, since they then could carry their arms openly.

2—That the much-vaunted Arab underground army in Palestine amounted to little, comparatively speaking, and would scarcely dare to tangle with the Jewish Haganah were the British not around.

3—That should such full-scale war actually erupt, in the immediate future, the vastly superior Haganah would unquestionably win all early battles—unless the Arabs received outside reinforcements.

Package Bomb Kills Brother Of Jews' Enemy

LONDON, May 4—The younger brother of a British army officer acquitted of the murder of a Palestinian Jew was killed today by a parcel bomb sent to their home.

The victim, Rex Farran, 26, was the brother of Capt. Roy Farran, who last October was found innocent of charges that he had kidnapped and killed Alexander Rubowitz, a 16-year-old member of the Jewish underground Stern Gang.

The bomb, enclosed in a volume of Shakespeare's plays was addressed to the elder Farran. When the younger Farran opened the parcel, the bomb went off with a terrific blast. Windows in the dining room were shattered by the explosion.

The lethal charge had been cleverly concealed in a cut-away section of the volume. The parcel had been mailed somewhere in Britain, and was delivered in the morning mail.

It was recalled that after Capt. Farran's acquittal, the Stern Gang had threatened to "follow him to the end of the world."

4—That, contrary to almost all official reports, the majority of native Palestine Arabs are not fanatical anti-Zionists at all, but can live in complete peace with the Jews.

5—That, despite all these facts and all their protestations, the British (who at that time still stressed their need to "protect" the Jews) would not pull their troops out of Palestine on May 15.

6—That the British eventually would come out openly on the side of the Arabs—and that, as a result, the Jewish militia (Haganah) and the Jewish extremist group of Irgun Zvai Leumi would join forces on at least some operations.

7—That if the British got out and the nearby Moslem states were ordered by the United Nations not to interfere, peace would return rapidly to Palestine and Arab and Jew would abide by the partition plan.

8—That former German army officers were training and leading Arab troops in attacks in Palestine, with full knowledge of the British.

THOSE WERE the conclusions. They were not particularly difficult to reach, nor were they spectacular—except for one thing.

They were flatly denied by most British and American leaders, who subsequently operated as though the exact opposite was true.

In view of those denials, let's look at the scorecard. Every point but No. 7 (which was hypothetical and yet untested) has been proved or officially admitted.

Haganah has protected the Jewish communities better than the British did. Jewish troops have easily won every full-scale battle, except (at this writing) Jaffa, where British threw tanks, airplanes and artillery to the aid of the Arabs, and where, as a result, Haganah and the Irgun joined forces. (That handles Points one, two, three and six.)

The other points are current history, where the fighting is not in progress. Jews and Arabs still live peacefully together. Instead of leaving, the British are bringing in British reinforcements; and the presence of Germans in Arab ranks has been confirmed.

Now all of this was learned by one American news correspondent in one month in Palestine—where the British have thousands of troops and intelligence agents, and America has countless military observers and intelligence operatives.

Yet, less than two months ago, all these things were angrily denied by British and American leaders, and our reversal of the U. S. stand on Palestine partition was based on just such now disproved denials.

So there's your John Doe indictment. You decide where the crime lies—whether we were being deliberately misled, or whether our leaders were being unbelievably negligent.

Do YOU Own A "Scratching" Dog?

If you own and are fond of a dog that is continually scratching, digging, rubbing, and biting himself until his skin is raw and sore, don't just feel sorry for him. The dog can't help himself. But you may. He may be clean and flea free and just suffering from an intense itching irritation that has centered in the nerve endings of his skin. Do as thousands of pleased dog owners are doing. At any good drug store, pet or sport shop, get a 30c package of Rex Hunters Dog Powders, and give them once a week. Note the quick improvement. One owner writes: "My female setter on Sept. 20th did not have a handful of hair on her body—all scratched and bitten off. I gave her the powders as directed. By Nov. 15th she was all haired out. Learn what they will do for your dog. Make a 30c test. (Economy size box for only $1.00). Important: Keep your dog clean and flea free with Rex Hunters Medicated Dog Soap and Pine Oil Disinfectant.

Navy Is Asked Assist State In Sea Duty Check

COLUMBUS, May 4—Navy Secretary John Sullivan was asked by the state of Ohio today for assistance in expediting payment of veterans' bonus claims to Navy enlisted men.

The state sinking fund commission, meeting today, asked Governor Herbert to contact Sullivan. The action was taken when the bonus headquarters ran into difficulty in determining the overseas service and sea duty of Navy veterans.

Headquarters now has about 180,000 Navy applications pending, of which two-thirds may be held up temporarily because of extra overseas credits. The other one-third of the applicants have 40 months service between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day and so will receive the maximum $400 bonus.

Army discharge papers list overseas service of veterans, but Navy discharges do not. Bonus headquarters is willing to prepare a simplified form for the use of the Navy department's personnel bureau if Sullivan agrees to the state's request.

Ohio Margarine Drive Starts

COLUMBUS, May 4—The oleo-margarine vs. butter battle flared up in Columbus today with the opening of a new headquarters for a high-sounding group—the Association of Voters for Yellow Margarine.

Purpose of the AVYM is to circulate petitions to initiate a bill before the Ohio legislature to allow the sale of colored margarine in the state.

The group needs 70,000 signatures to get a hearing for the bill next January.

The legislature turned thumbs down on a similar proposal last year. If this happens again, the association will need an extra 70,000 names to get its ideas on the ballot in November, 1949.

Sabbath Dancing Talked Again

U.S. LEADERS NEGLIGENT?

Writer Gives Indictment On Palestine Situation

BY KENNETH L. DIXON
WASHINGTON, May 4—This is what they call a "John Doe indictment."

That is, it merely sets forth the evidence and the charges of the crime or crimes committed—leaving the naming and accusing of actual individuals until later.

This is the indictment: That certain British and American leaders have been either, (1) guilty of deliberately misleading their peoples on the facts of the Palestine situation, or, (2) unbelievably negligent in the gathering and evaluating of information about that situation. This is the crime charged:

THAT, AS a direct or indirect result, thousands have been unnecessarily slain in the Holy Land, and the situation there remains bloodily unsettled today, which could involve the world in another war.

This is the evidence: During a period of approximately one month, from early February to early March of this year, this correspondent was in Palestine, talking to Jews, Arabs and British, and various other nations not involved directly in the situation. Also, he was using his own two eyes and ears in normal newsgathering fashion.

In a series of stories, written during that time and in mid-March, I listed the following seemingly obvious conclusions:

1—That the Jews did not need the British soldiers to "protect" them from the Arabs. Actually, they were far safer where British troops did not operate, since they then could carry their arms openly.

2—That the much-vaunted Arab underground army in Palestine amounted to little, comparatively speaking, and would scarcely dare to tangle with the Jewish Haganah were the British not around.

3—That should such full-scale war actually erupt, in the immediate future, the vastly superior Haganah would unquestionably win all early battles—unless the Arabs received outside reinforcements.

Package Bomb Kills Brother Of Jews' Enemy

LONDON, May 4—The younger brother of a British army officer acquitted of the murder of a Palestinian Jew was killed today by a parcel bomb sent to their home.

The victim, Rex Farran, 26, was the brother of Capt. Roy Farran, who last October was found innocent of charges that he had kidnapped and killed Alexander Rubowitz, a 16-year-old member of the Jewish underground Stern Gang.

The bomb, enclosed in a volume of Shakespeare's plays was addressed to the elder Farran. When the younger Farran opened the parcel, the bomb went off with a terrific blast. Windows in the dining room were shattered by the explosion.

The lethal charge had been cleverly concealed in a cut-away section of the volume. The parcel had been mailed somewhere in Britain, and was delivered in the morning mail.

It was recalled that after Capt. Farran's acquittal, the Stern Gang had threatened to "follow him to the end of the world."

4—That, contrary to almost all official reports, the majority of native Palestine Arabs are not fanatical anti-Zionists at all, but can live in peace with the Jews.

5—That, despite all these facts and all their protestations, the British (who at that time still stressed their need to "protect" the Jews) would not pull their troops out of Palestine on May 15.

6—That the British eventually would come out openly on the side of the Arabs—and that, as a result, the Jewish militia (Haganah) and the Jewish extremist group of Irgun Zvai Leumi would join forces on at least some operations.

7—That if the British got out and the nearby Moslem states were ordered by the United Nations not to interfere, peace would return rapidly to Palestine and Arab and Jew would abide by the partition plan.

8—That former German army officers were training and leading Arab troops in attacks in Palestine, with full knowledge of the British.

THOSE WERE the conclusions. They were not particularly difficult to reach, nor were they spectacular—except for one thing.

They were flatly denied by most British and American leaders, who subsequently operated as though the exact opposite was true.

In view of those denials, let's look at the scorecard. Every point but No. 7 (which was hypothetical and yet untested) has been proved or officially admitted.

Haganah has protected the Jewish communities better than the British did. Jewish troops have easily won every full-scale battle, except (at this writing) Jaffa, where British threw tanks, airplanes and artillery to the aid of the Arabs, and where, as a result, Haganah and the Irgun joined forces. (That handles Points one, two, three and six.)

The other points are current history, where the fighting is not in progress. Jews and Arabs still live peaceably together. Instead of leaving the British are bringing in bristling reinforcements; and the presence of Germans in Arab ranks has been confirmed.

Now all of this was learned by one American news correspondent in one month in Palestine—where the British have thousands of troops and intelligence agents, and America has countless military observers and intelligence operatives.

Yet, less than two months ago, all these things were angrily denied by British and American leaders, and our reversal of the U. S. stand on Palestine partition was based on just such now disproved denials.

So there's your John Doe indictment. You decide where the crime lies—whether we were being deliberately misled, or whether our leaders were being unbelievably negligent.

Do YOU Own A "Scratching" Dog?

If you own and are fond of a dog that is continually scratching, digging, rubbing, and biting himself until his skin is raw and sore, don't just feel sorry for him. The dog can't help himself. But you may. He may be clean and free and just suffering from an intense itching irritation that has centered in the nerve endings of his skin. Do as thousands of pleased dog owners are doing. At any good drug store, pet or sport shop, get a 30c package of Rex Hunters Dog Powders, and give them once a week. Note the quick improvement. One owner writes: "My female setter on Sept. 26th did not have a handful of hair on her body—all scratched and bitten off. I gave her the powders as directed. By Nov. 13th she was all haired out. Learn what they will do for your dog. Make a 30c test. (Economy size box for only $1.50). Important. Keep your dog clean and flea free with Rex Hunters Medicated Dog Soap and Fine Oil Distillate."

Navy Is Asked Assist State In Sea Duty Check

COLUMBUS, May 4—Navy Secretary John Sullivan was asked by the state of Ohio today for assistance in expediting payment of veterans' bonus claims to Navy enlisted men.

The state sinking fund commission, meeting today, asked Governor Herbert to contact Sullivan. The action was taken when the bonus headquarters ran into difficulty in determining the overseas service and sea duty of Navy veterans.

Headquarters now has about 180,000 Navy applications pending, of which two-thirds may be held up temporarily because of extra overseas credits. The other one-third of the applicants have 40 months service between Pearl Harbor and V-J Day and so will receive the maximum $400 bonus.

Army discharge papers list overseas service of veterans, but Navy discharges do not. Bonus headquarters is willing to prepare a simplified form for the use of the Navy department's personnel bureau if Sullivan agrees to the state's request.

Ohio Margarine Drive Starts

COLUMBUS, May 4—The oleo-margarine vs. butter battle flared up in Columbus today with the opening of a new headquarters for a high-sounding group—the Association of Voters for Yellow Margarine.

Purpose of the AVYM is to circulate petitions to initiate a bill before the Ohio legislature to allow the sale of colored margarine in the state.

The group needs 70,000 signatures to get a hearing for the bill next January.

The legislature turned thumbs down on a similar proposal last year. If this happens again, the association will need an extra 70,000 names to get its ideas on the ballot in November, 1949.

Sabbath Dancing Talked Again

AKRON, May 4—The hotly-contested question of whether Akron should permit Sunday dancing raised its head again today in city council.

An ordinance, which would have written the Sunday ban on dancing off the books, was defeated by the council last week.

Harold Nelson, an orchestra leader who first asked that the ban be lifted, yesterday demanded that council reconsider its 12-1 vote against the measure.

"The ordinance was turned down because of a pressure group, and I was asked not to use any pressure tactics and did not," said Nelson in a letter to council.

ARMS FOR EUROPE

THE PROPOSAL to send arms to Western Europe in a new lend-lease program immediately raises the question of how such a program would balance with our own problem of defense budgeting. A preponderant consideration in the outlining of the national defense budget is the effect of its cost upon the economy of the country. What is the wisdom of adding the cost of arms for Europe?

It must be assumed that the sending of arms to Europe would be part of an effort to fix in advance the pattern of United States participation in a third world war, if one should occur. It would be an effort to enable the United States to hold the same position that it has held in the two past world wars.

In the first and second wars, the action itself was held away from the American continents. The United States contributed men and materials, but did not become a battleground. The advantage of the position is obvious to anyone who has seen the areas which were battlegrounds.

Is the possible maintenance of that strategy worth the risk involved in diverting arms from our own military establishment? Is it worth the risk of acts which might increase the tensions in Europe? The questions call for careful and mature judgment.

THE THREAT OF STRIKE

IF A strike occurs on the railroads May 11, as now threatened, the people of the country once again will be presented with a spectacular demonstration of the high cost of the strike as an instrument of negotiation between labor and management. Other strikes frequently receive less notice, but in the final analysis they are not less costly.

The background of the railroad dispute emphasizes also that the strike could be outlawed only at the risk of depriving organized labor of its only effective means of forcing a continuance of negotiations until a satisfactory settlement is reached.

An invaluable service to all men would be rendered by devising an acceptable, less wasteful substitute for the strike. Federal mediation boards have been tried, with only mediocre results. A system of civil action in the established courts might be the answer, but the processes would have to be faster than is now the general rule.

When a solution is found, it will have to be one based on recognition of three fundamental interests in industry, those of ownership, labor, and the people.

Canada, with a population between 11,000,000 and 12,000,000, is going to admit 30,000 displaced persons from Europe this year in addition to 10,000 from Great Britain. The United States, with 11 or 12 times as many people, is not willing to admit any more than its regular quota. Depend upon it, the Communists are making the most of this unwillingness to share a burden, and it is operating against us in Europe.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

A wire report states: "COLUMBUS—Paul Robeson, colored operatic singer, told a colored editor here yesterday it was none of his 'damn business' whether he was a Communist."

"In a news conference—Mr. Robeson gave the reply to a question by George Lawrence, managing editor of the Ohio State News, colored weekly here.

"The last person in the world I would expect to ask that question," Mr. Robeson added, "would be a Negro and a representative of the Negro press. This is no longer a matter of Communism; it's a matter of civil rights. Draw your own conclusions."

Paul Robeson's error is that a man who projects himself into the public life of this country can have no secrets. His affairs are the public's business. His hearers and readers, his supporters and opponents have a right to know his background.

That is one reason for the popularity of "Who's Who In America." It gives an index to the mind of the public figure by recounting his origin, his activities and his associations.

In his authorized account of his life, Paul Robeson gives considerable data concerning his academic career, which is notable: A. B. and Honorary M. A., Rutgers; LL. B. Columbia; L. H. D. Hamilton, Moorhouse, Howard. The account also tells of his achievements on the stage and his tours and travels. But it says not one word of his politics to which, in recent years, he has devoted himself.

Apparently, that he wishes to keep secret while he stands in the agitation of a limelight. Congressional files show him to be most active in joining Fellow-Traveler organizations and in signing such petitions and sponsoring such causes as the Communists project. Altogether his name appears 74 times in this connection.

Whether he is a member of the Communist Party, he will not say. But he has been acting in public as though he were a member, and if this is innocence, it is of a kind that is wholly onesided. In a word, his innocence follows a pattern of lack of intelligence or hatred for American institutions. Certainly, no one with so many degrees can be quite so innocent.

So he says that it is no one's damn business whether he is or is not a Communist. Yet, Taft, Dewey, Stassen, Martin and Vandenberg are willing to say that they are Republicans, and Truman and thousands of others that they are Democrats. They find no need for concealing their party affiliations. Why are so many ashamed or afraid to say whether they are or are not Communists?

The answer is, of course, simple:

As Communists are now unpopular, some of these men and women are unwilling to make themselves totally unacceptable. Furthermore, there is a growing acknowledgement of the incontestable fact that the Communists and their Fellow-Travelers constitute a Fifth Column for Soviet Russia in the United States.

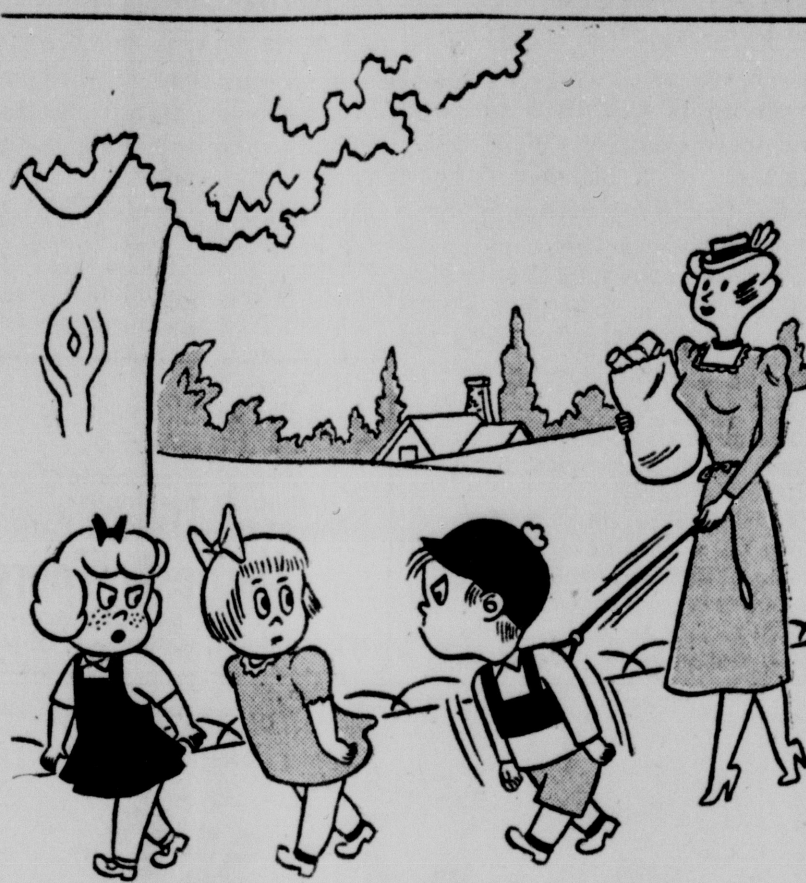

Each one of them is suspected of being a spy and a saboteur, a hidden enemy of this nation.

Therefore, they seek to avoid being labeled for what they are.

A good many congressional votes indicate that congressmen think the one really important thing is not to disturb their constituents' comfort. "Let sleeping constituents lie" is their motto. But what if the flood is rising or the neighbor's house is burning down?

The real aristocracy in many Americans' eyes consists of the lucky owners of new cars.

Treatment for Plantar Warts

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.
SUPPOSE you were left a fortune on condition you went about forever after with a pebble in your shoe. It seems a small price for a princely inheritance but a novelist once dealt with this situation and decided correctly that the fortune would be discarded about the third day to get rid of the pebble.

However that may be, there are some unfortunate who, in effect, have all the discomfort of the pebble without the consolation of financial reward. They are those who suffer from plantar warts. Now warts may occur on any part of the body, but they are most disabling and painful when they develop on the sole of the foot.

Exact Cause Unknown
Their exact cause is not known but it has been suggested that they may be due to an infection with a virus. Most warts are easy to deal with, but plantar warts are another story. They are very stubborn and difficult to eliminate.

The usual treatment consists of the use of X-ray. However, such treatments are not always available, and sometimes they do not destroy the growth.

A new treatment has been presented which is simple, does not disable the patient, and cures a high percentage. It causes no complications.

Ring Pad
A ring pad is put around the wart so that when the patient puts his weight on his foot, the wart protrudes through the hole in the pad. Then phenol or carbolic acid is applied to the wart in the proper dilution and immediately followed with nitric acid. The substances are applied carefully, in small amounts, and only by the doctor to make sure that just the wart itself is touched by them and that the surrounding normal skin is not damaged.

Before those substances are applied, the wart is pared down with a sharp knife or razor blade. If blisters or other signs of ringworm are present in the area of the wart, the treatment must be delayed until this condition has been cleared up.

No Discomfort
In the treatment with phenol and nitric acid, the patient experiences no discomfort. An ointment, made up of salicylic acid and placed over the wart in the ring, softens the wart so that it is trimmed more easily at the time of the next treatment. The entire pad is then covered and fastened to the foot with strips of adhesive tape.

The patient is permitted to bathe and is instructed to continue with his usual activities. Vigorous athletics, however, are prohibited. The dressing should not be disturbed.

In four or five days, the dressing is removed, and the wart with the surrounding callus is pared down as thin as possible. The procedure is then repeated as before.

From two to twelve treatments will be required to eradicate the wart, the average being six. After the treatment is completed, the patient should be examined monthly to make sure that the wart has not returned.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. A.: Will you please tell me something about hysteria?
Answer: Hysteria is a disorder in which the individual is easily influenced by suggestion, and in which certain body states are produced by this suggestion. Persons who are emotionally unstable are the ones who suffer chiefly from this trouble.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN
DON'S VOICE broke through Anne's absorption. "What's on your mind?"

She glanced up, smiling. "Oh, nothing much. Tell me. What do you think of Helen?"
"Not a great deal. Why?"
"Well, I saw you talking with her, so I wondered."
"What do you?"
"I? Well, I think she's the most completely and utterly selfish person I've ever met."

She spoke with more vehemence than she had intended and Don whistled. "That's no matter. I gather. Why?"
So she told him. She told him of Helen's curious lack of interest in Judy, of her detachment from the life at Stone House, of her deep-rooted determination to get John away and of her final success. Don listened attentively, his face non-committal. When she had finished, he said:

"And what, exactly, do you want to do about all of this?"
She gave a small, helpless laugh. "That's it. What can I do? Nothing. It's none of my business. But really! John ought not to have to go. She ought to let him alone. He—"

She stopped and her voice changed. "Let's go find him now, shall we?"
"If you like."

They stopped dancing and moved across the floor toward the verandah together. On the way Don took her elbow and held her close to his side while he spoke into her ear.

"You're right about one thing. It definitely is none of your business. So don't make it. Keep out. And—watch out!"

"Watch out? For what?"
"For Helen."

"Why on earth do you say that?"
"Well, a woman who feels as defeated as she does is a dangerous woman."

Anne stood still in astonishment and faced him.
"Defeated? But how can she possibly feel defeated when she's gotten John to promise to do something he's resisted doing for years? You're mistaken, Don. Helen's not defeated. She's triumphant."

He said slowly, "For an ambitious business gal in New York, life is pretty heartless. In time it makes her heartless. I've seen it happen over and over again. In a few years the good part of her gets hopelessly buried. Because there's no room in the business world for the generous impulses and thoughtful considerations that there's room for in domesticity. A woman has to be certain they'll pay dividends. I mean, before she yields to them. She can't afford to be tolerant and forgiving and gay, the way you are, just because those are good things to be."

"But I don't think that's always true at all. I know heaps—"

"I said an ambitious business gal. And Helen is that. She wants to get somewhere. Be somebody. But to succeed she has to shuck a part of herself along the way. The best part. And seeing you reminds her of it because you're all she isn't. Well, she'll strike at you some day for that reason. You mark my words—and don't give her a chance."

Anne had listened in amazement. First, because this was the longest serious speech she had ever heard Don make, and second, because of the perception that lay behind it.

She said, "How on earth did you get to know so much about Helen so soon?"
Don said lightly, "Don't you realize yet that women are my favorite branch of study? Ever since college."

And he took her elbow again and moved with her toward the verandah.

Through the open doorway John saw Anne coming. He saw her gown a floating blue mist about her, the blue flower in her hair, her white shoulders. He was aware of her, as he always was, in all of his senses, and he thought, "She is something that has happened to me that I can't stop or change. But I don't want to stop or change. But the knowledge was a stone in his heart."

Most of the time it was a stone. Yet there were other times when, recalling that morning at breakfast with her in her room, it became a wild and plunging hope. Or had he only imagined that she had made an unconscious revelation then? Had he only dreamed it up out of his own wishful thinking? And even if he hadn't—even if it were true that he had replaced Alec in her heart, what of it? There was still Helen. Would Helen give him his freedom if he could bring himself to ask for it? He could not guess. But if she did, she would make him pay for it. And he was afraid of the price.

"So what would be your answer to that, Mr. Doremus?"
John came back to the guests around him as Anne and Donald Ogden paused on the other side of the door, and saw Arthur Hopkinson leaning forward, his gray, intelligent eyes behind his glasses keen and expectant. The others—Fitch, Peters and a few of Helen's reporter friends—were waiting for him to speak.

He said, the lean oblong of his face as grave as his words, "The trouble is not and never has been over-production, Mr. Hopkinson. I don't agree with that at all. There has never been a surplus of food for the people of the world. Actually there is a constant scarcity. But there could be enough, I believe. The real trouble lies in the fact that surplus piles up. And these pile up because of poor distribution. Also because of outdated and abominable relations in trade between nations. There's the nub of the thing as I see it."

"Have you any concrete suggestions to make as a remedy to that situation?"
"I can say it in two words: Christian co-operation. If we would put Christianity into our trade relations and leave politics and expediency and greed out, we would begin to get somewhere."

Mr. Hopkinson drew a breath and sat back. "I do wish you'd write a book for me."

"What kind of book?"
"A book to awaken Americans. Along, of course. But a book with all the passion in it that you feel for this whole problem. There would have to be passion in it for it to be read. There would have to be people in it, too, along with your theories about—say—organic chemistry as the primary necessity for the restoration of the soil."

He smiled. "I realize I'm being a bit vague. But then if I could tell a man exactly how to write a book I would write it myself and be saved a lot of bother and a whole lot of money."

John said thoughtfully, "The point, of course, would be that our economic security and the economic welfare of the rest of the world, as well, rests on the land. That without that economic security America is a dying power. And that unless we salvage what is left to us from our pilfering predecessors—the forests as well as the farms—and get back to the idea of a balanced budget, thrift, honest wages for honest work and independence in place of dependence on subsidies and pensions—"

Unless we do all that, we will shortly approximate in living conditions here those that now exist in Europe."

"But that's impossible!"
John looked up. Anne and Don had come through the doorway and it was Don who had spoken. He had thrown his challenge because he had felt that the conversation was ending just as he was arriving, and he wanted to hear this John, about whom Anne had said so much, talk.

Anne said, "John, this is Donald Ogden. I've told you about him. Mr. Hopkinson, Mr. Ogden. And Mr. Peters—"

She went around the group.

Don acknowledged the introductions impatiently and then turned to John again.

"America could never possibly slide down to Europe's level," he said.

John's glance met his quietly. "Never is a long word. And no nation is always immune to its own mad errors. Ours have been so great, still are—that we have already gone further along that road than most people realize." He began to quote statistics.

He scored pump-priming and political maneuvering and the prevalent national desire to get something for nothing. He talked quickly, forcefully, while Don stared at him through a cloud of cigarette smoke, his eyes no longer bored, and Arthur Hopkinson sat nodding and listening in exultant joy.

"They're off," Anne thought, and slipped unobtrusively into a seat on the outside edge of the circle.

Foreign Aid May Be Cut As Fear of Reds Lessens Packing Strike Forecasts New Labor Storms Ahead

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—The administration's foreign aid program that went through Congress without impairment, due to public indignation over Russian aggressive moves in Czechoslovakia and Finland, and the Italian pre-election situation, still faces its toughest hurdle.

Only one billion of the $3 billion dollars authorized has thus far become available. The Foreign Aid Act was only an authorization. Congress must still draw up and approve an appropriation bill providing specific funds for the vast number of projects to be undertaken.

This measure is under the jurisdiction of the Republican party's chief Treasury watchdog and economy advocate—Chairman John Taber, of New York, of the House appropriations committee.

Taber, whose reputation in Congress swings on his ability and determination to save money, is quietly sharpening his well-publicized axe in anticipation of the job facing him.

There is little doubt in informed Washington circles that actual appropriations for foreign aid will be trimmed somewhat. The cut may be deeper than expected, though, in view of the changed world situation which now confronts Congress.

Public interest is no longer enlivened by a picture of Communism actually taking over or threatening new European countries. One further factor points to curtailed foreign aid appropriations.

More Air Production Stressed

Best-informed members of Congress, like Rep. Carl Hinshaw (R., California), stress the production angle rather than the push for a 70-group Air Force.

Hinshaw, vice chairman of the congressional aviation policy board, points out that the services currently are receiving new planes at the rate of 21,000,000 airplane pounds a year and withdrawing 43,000,000 pounds from war-surplus storage. Under the 70-group program, regarded necessary for adequate air defense, procurement will have to be boosted to 111,000,000 pounds a year. It will take three years, according to the experts, to rebuild the once-booming industry back to where it can turn out that much aircraft poundage.

—the additional funds required to build up national defense threaten to throw the budget out of balance. The GOP will not have that this election year.

● MORE LABOR STORMS AHEAD—Outside the annual spring coal crisis, government experts had 1948 pegged as a quiet year on the labor front, but they are revising the forecast. It looks like stormy weather ahead.

Federal labor men had predicted speedy settlement of union wage demands along the lines of a 10 or 12-cent hourly increase pattern adopted in many small plants.

The prediction has not materialized in the big mass production industries. First, a strike broke in the packing industry when the nine-cent increase was turned down.

Then ship owners refused any pay boost and Big Steel followed suit. Chrysler, first of the auto firms to negotiate, offered only six cents an hour. A strike appears likely.

Worst of all, another railroad strike was scheduled to begin May 11.

● AIR POWER DEPENDS ON AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY—Overlooked in all the discussion about increasing the Air Force is the necessity for rebuilding America's aircraft production industry, which has been almost dismantled since the war.

ARMS FOR EUROPE

THE PROPOSAL to send arms to Western Europe in a new lend-lease program immediately raises the question of how such a program would balance with our own problem of defense budgeting. A preponderant consideration in the outlining of the national defense budget is the effect of its cost upon the economy of the country. What is the wisdom of adding the cost of arms for Europe?

It must be assumed that the sending of arms to Europe would be part of an effort to fix in advance the pattern of United States participation in a third world war, if one should occur. It would be an effort to enable the United States to hold the same position that it has held in the two past world wars.

In the first and second wars, the action itself was held away from the American continents. The United States contributed men and materials, but did not become a battleground. The advantage of the position is obvious to anyone who has seen the areas which were battlegrounds.

Is the possible maintenance of that strategy worth the risk involved in diverting arms from our own military establishment? Is it worth the risk of acts which might increase the tensions in Europe? The questions call for careful and mature judgment.

THE THREAT OF STRIKE

IF A strike occurs on the railroads May 11, as now threatened, the people of the country once again will be presented with a spectacular demonstration of the high cost of the strike as an instrument of negotiation between labor and management. Other strikes frequently receive less notice, but in the final analysis they are not less costly.

The background of the railroad dispute emphasizes also that the strike could be outlawed only at the risk of depriving organized labor of its only effective means of forcing a continuance of negotiations until a satisfactory settlement is reached.

An invaluable service to all men would be rendered by devising an acceptable, less wasteful substitute for the strike. Federal mediation boards have been tried, with only mediocre results. A system of civil action in the established courts might be the answer, but the processes would have to be faster than is now the general rule.

When a solution is found, it will have to be one based on recognition of three fundamental interests in industry, those of ownership, labor, and the people.

Canada, with a population between 11,000,000 and 12,000,000, is going to admit 30,000 displaced persons from Europe this year in addition to 10,000 from Great Britain. The United States, with 11 or 12 times as many people, is not willing to admit any more than its regular quota. Depend upon it, the Communists are making the most of this unwillingness to share a burden, and it is operating against us in Europe.

George E. Sokolsky's

These Days

A wire report states: "COLUMBUS—Paul Robeson, colored operatic singer, told a colored editor here yesterday it was none of his 'damn business' whether he was a Communist."

"In a news conference—Mr. Robeson gave the reply to a question by George Lawrence, managing editor of the Ohio State News, colored weekly here.

"The last person in the world I would expect to ask that question," Mr. Robeson added, "would be a Negro and a representative of the Negro press. This is no longer a matter of Communism; it's a matter of civil rights. Draw your own conclusions."

Paul Robeson's error is that a man who projects himself into the public life of this country can have no secrets. His affairs are the public's business. His hearers and readers, his supporters and opponents have a right to know his background.

That is one reason for the popularity of "Who's Who In America." It gives an index to the mind of the public figure by recounting his origin, his activities and his associations.

In his authorized account of his life, Paul Robeson gives considerable data concerning his academic career, which is notable: A. B. and Honorary M. A., Rutgers; LL. B. Columbia; L. H. D. Hamilton, Moorhouse, Howard. The account also tells of his achievements on the stage and his tours and travels. But it says not one word of his politics to which, in recent years, he has devoted himself.

Apparently, that he wishes to keep secret while he stands in the agitated limelight. Congressional files show him to be most active in joining Fellow-Traveler organizations and in signing such petitions and sponsoring such causes as the Communists project. Altogether his name appears 74 times in this connection.

Whether he is a member of the Communist Party, he will not say. But he has been acting in public as though he were a member, and if this is innocence, it is of a kind that is wholly one-sided. In a word, his innocence follows a pattern of lack of intelligence or hatred for American institutions. Certainly, no one with so many degrees can be quite so innocent.

So he says that it is no one's damn business whether he is or is not a Communist. Yet, Taft, Dewey, Stassen, Martin and Vandenberg are willing to say that they are Republicans, and Truman and thousands of others that they are Democrats. They find no need for concealing their party affiliations. Why are so many ashamed or afraid to say whether they are or are not Communists?

The answer is, of course, simple:

As Communists are now unpopular, some of these men and women are unwilling to make themselves totally unacceptable. Furthermore, there is a growing acknowledgment of the incontestable fact that the Communists and their Fellow-Travelers constitute a Fifth Column for Soviet Russia in the United States.

Each one of them is suspected of being a spy and a saboteur, a hidden enemy of this nation.

Therefore, they seek to avoid being labeled for what they are.

A good many congressional votes indicate that congressmen think the one really important thing is not to disturb their constituents' comfort. "Let sleeping constituents lie" is their motto. But what if the flood is rising or the neighbor's house is burning down?

The real aristocracy in many Americans' eyes consists of the lucky owners of new cars.

Treatment for Plantar Warts

By HERMAN N. BUNDESEN, M.D.

SUPPOSE you were left a fortune on condition you went about forever after with a pebble in your shoe. It seems a small price for a princely inheritance but a novelist once dealt with this situation and decided correctly that the fortune would be discarded about the third day to get rid of the pebble.

However that may be, there are some unfortunate who, in effect, have all the discomfort of the pebble without the consolation of financial reward. They are those who suffer from plantar warts. Now warts may occur on any part of the body, but they are most disabling and painful when they develop on the sole of the foot.

Exact Cause Unknown
Their exact cause is not known but it has been suggested that they may be due to an infection with a virus. Most warts are easy to deal with, but plantar warts are another story. They are very stubborn and difficult to eliminate.

The usual treatment consists of the use of X-ray. However, such treatments are not always available, and sometimes they do not destroy the growth.

A new treatment has been presented which is simple, does not disable the patient, and cures a high percentage. It causes no complications.

Ring Pad
A ring pad is put around the wart so that when the patient puts his weight on his foot, the wart protrudes through the hole in the pad. Then phenol or carbolic acid is applied to the wart in the proper dilution and immediately followed with nitric acid. The substances are applied carefully, in small amounts, and only by the doctor to make sure that just the wart itself is touched by them and that the surrounding normal skin is not damaged. Before these substances are applied, the wart is pared down with a sharp knife or razor blade. If blisters or other signs of ringworm are present in the area of the wart, the treatment must be delayed until this condition has been cleared up.

No Discomfort

In the treatment with phenol and nitric acid, the patient experiences no discomfort. An ointment, made up of salicylic acid and placed over the wart in the ring, softens the wart so that it is trimmed more easily at the time of the next treatment. The entire pad is then covered and fastened to the foot with strips of adhesive tape.

The patient is permitted to bathe and is instructed to continue with his usual activities. Vigorous athletics, however, are prohibited. The dressing should not be disturbed.

In four or five days, the dressing is removed, and the wart with the surrounding callus is pared down as thin as possible. The procedure is then repeated as before.

From two to twelve treatments will be required to eradicate the wart, the average being six. After the treatment is completed, the patient should be examined monthly to make sure that the wart has not returned.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

R. A.: Will you please tell me something about hysteria?

Answer: Hysteria is a disorder in which the individual is easily influenced by suggestion, and in which certain body states are produced by this suggestion. Persons who are emotionally unstable are the ones who suffer chiefly from this trouble.

CHAPTER EIGHTEEN

DON'S VOICE broke through Anne's absorption. "What's on your mind?"

She glanced up, smiling. "Oh, nothing much. Tell me. What do you think of Helen?"

"Not a great deal. Why?"

"Well, I saw you talking with her, so I wondered."

"What do you?"

"I? Well, I think she's the most completely and utterly selfish person I've ever met."

She spoke with more vehemence than she had intended and Don whistled. "Phew! You feel strongly on the matter, I gather. Why?"

So she told him. She told him of Helen's curious lack of interest in Judy, of her detachment from the life at Stone House, of her deep-rooted determination to get John away and of her final success. Don listened attentively, his face non-committal. When she had finished, he said:

"And what, exactly, do you want to do about all of this?"

"She gave a small, helpless laugh. 'That's it. What can I do? Nothing. It's none of my business. But really! John ought not to have to go. She ought to let him alone. He—' She stopped and her voice changed. 'Let's go find him now, shall we?'"

"If you like."

They stopped dancing and moved across the floor toward the veranda together. On the way Don took her elbow and held her close to his side while he spoke into her ear.

"You're right about one thing. It definitely is none of your business. So don't make it. Keep out. And—watch out."

"Watch out? For what?"

"For Helen."

"Why on earth do you say that?"

"Well, a woman who feels as defeated as she does is a dangerous woman."

Anne stood still in astonishment and faced him.

"Defeated? But how can she possibly feel defeated when she's gotten John to promise to do something he's resisted doing for years? You're mistaken. Don, Helen's not defeated. She's triumphant."

He said slowly, "For an ambitious business gal in New York, life is pretty heartless. In time it makes her heartless. I've seen it happen over and over again. In a few years the good part of her gets hopelessly buried. Because there's no room in the business world for the generous impulses and thoughtful considerations that there's room for in domesticity. A woman has to be certain they'll pay dividends. I mean, before she yields to them. She can't afford to be tolerant and forgiving and gay, the way you are, just because those are good things to be."

"But I don't think that's always true at all. I know heaps—"

"I said an ambitious business gal. And Helen is that. She wants to get somewhere. Be somebody. But to succeed she has to shuck a part of herself along the way. The best part. And seeing you reminds her of it because you're all she isn't. Well, she'll strike at you some day for that reason. You mark my words—and don't give her a chance."

Anne had listened in amazement. First, because this was the longest serious speech she had ever heard Don make, and second, because of the perception that lay behind it.

She said, "How on earth did you get to know so much about Helen so soon?"

Don said lightly, "Don't you realize yet that women are my favorite branch of study? Ever since college."

And he took her elbow again and moved with her toward the veranda.

Through the open doorway John saw Anne coming. He saw her gown a floating blue mist about her, the blue flower in her hair, her white shoulders. He was aware of her, as he always was, in all of his senses, and he thought, "She is something that has happened to me that I can't stop or change."

That I don't want to stop or change. But the knowledge was a stone in his heart.

Most of the time it was a stone. Yet there were other times when, recalling that morning at breakfast with her in her room, it became a wild and plunging hope. Or had he only imagined that she had made an unconscious revelation then? Had he only dreamed it up out of his own wishful thinking? And even if he hadn't—even if it were true that he had replaced Helen in her heart, what of it? There was still Helen. Would Helen give him his freedom if he could bring himself to ask for it? He could not guess. Put if she did, she would make him pay for it. And he was afraid of the price.

He was afraid because of Judy. "So what would be your answer to that, Mr. Doremus?"

John came back to the guests around him as Anne and Donald Ogden paused on the other side of the door and saw Arthur Hopkinson leaning forward, his gray, intelligent eyes behind his glasses keen and expectant. The others—Fitch, Peters and a few of Helen's reporter friends—were waiting for him to speak.

He said, the lean oblong of his face as grave as his words, "The trouble is not and never has been over-production, Mr. Hopkinson. I don't agree with that at all. There has never in the history of the world been a surplus of food for the people of the world. Actually there is a constant scarcity. But there could be enough, I believe. The real trouble lies in the fact that surplus piles up. And these pile up because of poor distribution. Also because of outdated and abominable relations in trade between nations. There's the nub of the thing as I see it."

"Have you any concrete suggestions to make as a remedy to that situation?"

"I can say it in two words: Christian co-operation. If we would put Christianity into our trade relations and leave politics and expediency and greed out, we would begin to get somewhere."

Mr. Hopkinson drew a breath and sat back. "I do wish you'd write a book for me."

"What kind of book?"

"A book to awaken Americans. Along the lines that we've been talking, of course. But a book with all the passion in it that you feel for this whole problem. There would have to be passion in it for it to be read. There would have to be people in it, too, along with your theories about—say—organic chemistry as the primary necessity for the restoration of the soil."

He smiled. "I realize I'm being a bit vague. But then if I could tell a man exactly how to write a book I would write it myself and be saved a lot of bother and a whole lot of money."

John said thoughtfully, "The point, of course, would be that our economic security and the economic welfare of the rest of the world, as well, rests on the land. That without that economic security America is a dying power. And that unless we salvage what is left to us from our pilfering predecessors—the forests as well as the farms—and get back to the idea of a balanced budget, thrift, honest wages for honest work and the re-establishment of individual independence in place of dependence on subsidies and pensions—"

Unless we do all that, we will shortly approximate in living conditions here those that now exist in Europe."

"But that's impossible!"

John looked up. Anne and Don had come through the doorway and it was Don who had spoken. He had thrown his challenge because he had felt that the conversation was ending just as he was arriving, and he wanted to hear this John, about whom Anne had said so much, talk.

Anne said, "John, this is Donald Ogden. I've told you about him. And Mr. Hopkinson, Mr. Ogden. And Mr. Peters—"

She went around the group.

Don acknowledged the introductions impatiently and then turned to John again.

"America could never possibly slide down to Europe's level," he said.

"Never's a long word. And no nation is always immune to its own mad errors. Ours have been so great—and still are—that we have already gone further along that road than most people realize." He began to quote statistics.

He scored pump-priming and political maneuvering and the prevalent national desire to get something for nothing. He talked quickly, forcefully, while Don stared at him through a cloud of cigarette smoke, his eyes no longer bored, and Arthur Hopkinson sat nodding and listening in exultant joy.

"They're off," Anne thought, and slipped unobtrusively into a seat on the outside edge of the circle.

Interesting Programs At Social Affairs

Observances of Mother's Day was marked by two banquets and a tea Monday evening at annual celebrations sponsored by Mrs. Marion's Sunday school class of First Methodist church, the Von Bora Society of Trinity Lutheran church and the Trailmaker's class of Calvary Evangelical United Brethren church.

Places were set for 50 members and their guests in the social rooms of the First Methodist church for the banquet sponsored by Mrs. Marion's class. Tables were decorated with yellow candles and miniature May poles surrounded by pastel colored dancing dolls. At each place was a lace paper backed program.

The Rev. Elisha Kneisley offered the invocation. Welcome was voiced by Mrs. Olan V. Bostwick and the response by Mrs. Edgar Carmean. Remarks were given by Miss Letha Beavers.

Mrs. George Marion of Celina, former teacher of the class, addressed the group. A vocal solo was offered by Mrs. Clyde Wells. Bobby Chalfin and Charles Magill played trombone duets. Miss Lois Defenbaugh sang a vocal solo. All vocal selections were accompanied by Mrs. Harold Defenbaugh at the piano.

Mrs. John E. Wells gave a reading entitled "A Tribute To Mother". Colored moving pictures portraying scenes from "Tulip Time" in Holland, Mich., the West coast and Carlsbad Caverns were shown by John A. Wells.

Gifts were presented each mother present. Mrs. A. V. Osborne of Circleville and Mrs. Anna M. Hedges of Ashville also were remembered as being the oldest mothers at the affair.

Among the guests were Mrs. Carmean, Mrs. Osborne, the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Kneisley, Mr. and Mrs. John E. Wells, Mrs. Harry Grimes, Mrs. Leona Hedges, Mrs. Kathleen Jones, Mrs. H. B. Given, Mrs. W. E. Hilyard, Miss Barbara Pontius, and Mrs. P. A. Teegardin of Circleville; Mrs. Philip Lanman of Ashville, Route 2, Mrs. Winifred Wallace of Columbus, Mrs. H. B. Committee members responsible for the affair were Mrs. Dwight Steele, Mrs. Leland Dunkle, Miss Peggy Parks, Mrs. Glenn Hines, Mrs. Carl Johnson, Mrs. Charles Schneider, Mrs. Emmitt Wood, Mrs. Leonard Williams, Mrs. Willson Leist, Mrs. Berman Wertman, Mrs. Howard Cook, Mrs. Harold Ulom, Miss Beavers and Mrs. Bostwick.

Potted pansy plants marked each place at the Von Bora banquet, for members and guests in the Lutheran parish house. As places were found, music was offered by Joyce Troutman and Patty Shellhammer. The room was decorated in large baskets of dogwood, spirea and tulips. Bouquets of lily of the valley and buttercups flanked by yellow tapers graced each table.

"The Lord's Prayer" was sung by the Circleville high school quintet, Nancy Sensenbrenner, Betty Lou Helwag, Jean Heine, Edna Maynard and Nancy Eshelman.

Mrs. Harold Anderson served as toastmistress and presented Mrs. Luther Bower, president, who welcomed the guests. Mrs. Frank Turner gave the response.

TOO MUCH FEATHER-BEDDING

Griswold Says Continued Aid To Greeks Is Needed

ATHENS, May 4—Dwight P. Griswold, chief of the American aid mission, warned today that Greece would come under Communist domination within 30 days if the United States abandoned its military and economic help.

The former Nebraska governor emphasized the importance of continued U. S. aid to Greece and said he felt the results to date have fully justified that program.

Griswold declared that Greece cannot be made self-supporting with the aid which it is now receiving from the United States, and added that the only solution for the Greek economic problem is large scale industrialization of the country.

He disclosed that the present Greek army offensive against the Communist guerrillas was undertaken as a result of pressure from the American advisers and with some reluctance on the part of the Greek leaders.

ASKED WHETHER cooperation between the American mission and the Greek government was working out satisfactorily, Griswold said he thought personal relations were very pleasant and more satisfactory than he had anticipated.

Griswold said that the mission had talked for a long time about the importance of the Greek army getting out into the field and chasing the guerrillas instead of merely standing guard in the larger towns and villages.

The Greek leaders, he added, thought it was more important to protect the villages than to go running after the guerrillas into the mountain heights.

The U. S. mission chief said he felt the amount of aid which the American government is giving Greece is about as much as the country could absorb under present conditions.

He made it clear, however, that in his opinion this was not enough to be enough to make Greece self-supporting.

A restoration of stable economic conditions and the prosperity of the country depends, in his view, on termination of the civil war, confidence of the people in the nation's security against invasion, and industrialization.

At present, Griswold thinks there is a tremendous amount of feather-bedding in industry and government in Greece, with too many people receiving salaries for work they do not do or work that could be done by fewer people.

Anderson Cites Need For Good Conservation

COLUMBUS, May 4 — Columbus Friends of the Land continued their conservation work today with fresh encouragement from U. S. Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson.

He called last night for a unified conservation department and predicted that enough food could be produced for everyone in the world.

Anderson said he had recommended a single agency to head the soil conservation service and the agricultural conservation program. However, he did not say whether he thought the agency should be in his department or in a separate office.

Anderson said this might be one of his last speeches as a cabinet member. He will resign to run for the Senate from New Mexico. He continued:

"I HAVE confidence that the job of producing the food the world needs—for health, for happiness, for peace—can be done.

"But I am enough of a realist to recognize that it may be the most tremendous undertaking mankind has ever attempted."

The agriculture chief said: "All conservation work, whether done on the farm or elsewhere must conform with one policy, for you cannot plan or achieve farm conservation without water and forest conservation."

Payne Satisfied By Correction

SPRINGFIELD, May 4—Albert E. Payne, Springfield, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, retracted today the threat of a libel suit made against former Governor James M. Cox, Dayton publisher.

Payne said Cox "masterfully stopped his presses Monday and printed a front page correction of his incorrect Sunday editorial."

Payne's original petition stated the Sunday piece declared Gov. Thomas Herbert, GOP incumbent, "had no opposition."

Power Line Kills Man, 46

XENIA, May 4—Greene County Coroner H. C. Schick, had returned a verdict of accidental death today in the case of Alfonso H. Benning, 46, electrocuted before the eyes of his two brothers.

His brothers, Chester and Ralph, were working with him on live wires in nearby Yellow Springs when the accident occurred yesterday. Benning had worked for the department for 25 years.

FARMERS WOULD DO ALL RIGHT under the price support program okayed by the House agriculture committee. General George Washington Gets Eye In Court

CLEVELAND, May 4 — Cuyahoga County jail hung out a sign today reading, "General George Washington slept here."

But the general ain't there no mo'. Instead he has been referred to the probation department for his part in the strong-arm robbery of Canary Williams, 47, March 19 in Cleveland.

General George Washington, that's his real name, told Common Pleas Judge Joseph A. Artl that he had slugged Williams, but with no intention of robbery, and that the beating and the robbery were not connected.

Since Washington reputedly never told a lie, Judge Artl had no choice but to believe the 21-year-old youth. He still found him guilty of a lesser charge of assault and battery, however.

John Massey, 36, accused of brandishing a knife over Williams while a woman accomplice went through his pockets and took $6 and a pocket knife, got off not so lightly. He was sentenced to from 10 to 25 years in the Ohio penitentiary. Police still are searching for the woman.

TOO MUCH FEATHER-BEDDING

Griswold Says Continued Aid To Greeks Is Needed

ATHENS, May 4—Dwight P. Griswold, chief of the American aid mission, warned today that Greece would come under Communist domination within 30 days if the United States abandoned its military and economic help.

The former Nebraska governor emphasized the importance of continued U. S. aid to Greece and said he felt the results to date have fully justified that program.

Griswold declared that Greece cannot be made self-supporting with the aid which it is now receiving from the United States, and added that the only solution for the Greek economic problem is large scale industrialization of the country.

He disclosed that the present Greek army offensive against the Communist guerrillas was undertaken as a result of pressure from the American advisers and with some reluctance on the part of the Greek leaders.

ASKED WHETHER cooperation between the American mission and the Greek government was working out satisfactorily, Griswold said he thought personal relations were very pleasant and more satisfactory than he had anticipated.

Griswold said that the mission had talked for a long time about the importance of the Greek army getting out into the field and chasing the guerrillas instead of merely standing guard in the larger towns and villages.

The Greek leaders, he added, thought it was more important to protect the villages than to go running after the guerrillas into the mountain heights.

The U. S. mission chief said he felt the amount of aid which the American government is giving Greece is about as much as the country could absorb under present conditions.

He made it clear, however, that in his opinion this was not going to be enough to make Greece self-supporting.

A restoration of stable economic conditions and the prosperity of the country depends, in his view, on termination of the civil war, confidence of the people in the nation's security against invasion, and industrialization.

At present, Griswold thinks there is a tremendous amount of feather-bedding in industry and government in Greece, with too many people receiving salaries for work they do not do or work that could be done by fewer people.

General George Washington Gets Eye In Court

CLEVELAND, May 4 — Cuyahoga County jail hung out a sign today reading, "General George Washington slept here."

But the general ain't there no mo'. Instead he has been referred to the probation department for his part in the strong-arm robbery of Canary Williams, 47, March 19 in Cleveland.

General George Washington, that's his real name, told Common Pleas Judge Joseph A. Artl that he had slugged Williams, but with no intention of robbery, and that the beating and the robbery were not connected.

Since Washington reputedly never told a lie, Judge Artl had no choice but to believe the 21-year-old youth. He still found him guilty of a lesser charge of assault and battery, however.

John Massey, 36, accused of brandishing a knife over Williams while a woman accomplice went through his pockets and took $6 and a pocket knife, got off not so lightly. He was sentenced to from 10 to 25 years in the Ohio penitentiary. Police still are searching for a woman.

FORGOTTEN GERMANY IN '38?

Militarist Pooh-Poohs 'No War Possible' Talk

Circleville Kiwanis Club Monday night heard an Ohio State university military instructor chide many modern day spokesmen who contend that "there cannot be war in the near future because no potential enemy of America is ready."

Pooh-poohing this philosophy was Maj. Robert Johnston, OSU faculty member, who spoke to Kiwanians on modern weapons, especially the atom bomb.

Johnston declared that current thinkers who believe that Russia, for instance, is not capable of waging war as of today "have forgotten that the same was said of Germany in 1938. And it was not too much later that World War II was fully underway."

The speaker declared that "America has the A-bomb but she has no bases from which to deliver the missile. Russia may or may not have the bomb, but she definitely is in a position to deliver it if she has it."

HE EXPLAINED that the U. S. lacks bases from which even her largest aircraft can take off and bomb Russia's industrial centers and then return. However, Russia's most forward bases, far from her own industrial centers, are within modern heavy bomber striking distance of America's industrial centers.

Johnston declared that "Russia is now within walking time of three or four weeks of engulfing the whole of Continental Europe, but would America drop the A-bomb on Paris, Amsterdam—on her friends—if the Soviets should take over that territory by force?"

The speaker said that when World War II ended, America secured two copies of a new German submarine, which the Nazis had not used in combat, but which was far superior to other subs.

He declared that the German sub was capable of travelling 25 to 30 knots while submerged, that it could remain submerged for days and that it could travel at high rates of speed in far greater depths than previously were known.

He said that while the U. S. secured two of these German submarines, the Russians secured several copies, many parts and the entire German construction yards.

HE SAID THIS submarine "is good enough to cut off the whole of England from surface shipping should another war start and it could be used as a launching platform for rockets in an attack on the American shore."

Johnston said he did not believe that the rocket has been developed to the point where it could be used to carry an A-bomb warhead. He cited that so far, American has not been able to develop a rocket which will exceed the German V-2 range of 700-odd miles.

To augment his discussion of the A-bomb, he showed films detailing the theory of atomic fission and the two A-tests at Bikini.

A vast reorganization of the entire British army to place its high command on a scientific and "atomic" basis has just been disclosed and its ramifications may prove a blow to the military career families of the British Isles.

The war office has set up what is called a military college of science.

Both attendance and graduation with degrees will be "musts" for the men entrusted with the defense of the United Kingdom and with its military leadership should another war come.

The emphasis naturally is upon the use of atomic energy in future warfare.

But less generally realized is the fact that under the rules laid down by the government, it now will be possible for any private individual from the lowliest family rise to the rank of field marshal, a thing virtually unknown in the British army.

THERE WAS one major exception, and the average British soldier to this day reveres the memory of Sir William Robert Robertson, who enlisted as a private in the famed 16th Lancs in 1877, fought in India, South Africa, Suez and Flanders, finally gaining a field marshal's baton, a baronetcy and a gift of $50,000 from the crown. British aristocracy never has lacked its military heroes.

Yet the outbreak of World War II in 1939 found Britain with many deficiencies in some of its most important commands. There were some generals in key posts who were there chiefly by right of seniority or heritage.

By the time shakeups were completed, particularly at Singapore and elsewhere in the Far East after the Japanese had attacked, the British had lost much ground that was painful indeed to recover.

In announcing the new setup, the war office has not publicly acknowledged these failings.

But it is convinced that the Germans were severely handicapped and perhaps lost the war because of the almost complete cleavage between the Junker's high command and the German academies of learning.

It was traditional for Prussian militarists to look down upon teachers and academicians as little, short-sighted, spectacled men in frock coats, objects of derision rather than of immeasurable assistance.

Great Britain's present theory is that the more doctors of science she has in her new army, the better she will be prepared to combat any new weapons that a potential enemy may offer. The new war college will graduate 200 top-level men each year.

Field Marshal Dr. John Smith may be leading an army if Britain has to go to war again.

Potatoes Important in Freedom Garden

POTATOES rate a place in the Freedom garden but be careful when selecting them for seed purposes. Do not use potatoes afflicted with scab, an example of which is shown in the accompanying Garden-Graph.

The safest procedure is to buy certified seed potatoes, which have been treated for scab and are free of disease.

Select well formed and fairly large seed potatoes. Such potatoes should have stubby sprouts, for this type when planted will grow more vigorously than sprouts which are overly long and apt to be soft.

Each piece of potato when cut for planting should have one or two eyes, as illustrated, but not more than three. Each piece should have as much flesh as possible.

Repeal of the oleo tax laws would be felt first by the farmer who milks from 3 to 6 cows since most of this milk goes directly into butter. Butter is the product you rely on to meet every day expenses and taxes. In addition, butter provides a market for all surplus milk. Butter thus directly

Courthouse Forum Open To Public

A special countywide conference on health problems in the public schools has been scheduled to be held in the Pickaway County courthouse May 11.

George D. McDowell, superintendent of county schools, said Tuesday that heads of all schools in the county system, teachers, parents' organizations members of boards of persons have been invited to attend the conference.

The meeting will be held in cooperation with the Ohio State university program on health education.

Cooperating will be officials representing Ohio's state health and welfare departments.

Featured speaker will be Dr. Thomas E. Shaffer of Ohio State university.

OTHERS on the program include Mrs. Florence Fogle, associate health coordinator, and Dr. Del Oberteuffer.

McDowell said that although the conference has interest pointed especially to school authorities, coaches and teachers of health, the meeting is open to the public.

Discussions and lectures will stress the growing need for greater emphasis on health instruction in the public schools and on the various problems involved.

The forum is scheduled to start at 7:30 p. m. in the common pleas courtroom of the courthouse.

Pleasure Jaunt Costs Youth $25

A 16-year-old Columbus youth Monday asked Probate Judge Sterling M. Lamb whether he wanted the fine in cash or by money order after Lamb had fined him $25 and costs for operating a car without the owner's consent.

Roy Murry Jr. was arrested by State Highway Patrolman L. G. Ridenour for driving a 1947 Packard Clipper 75 mph. When asked to show his license, Murry had none.

In probate court, it was learned the youth was hired by Mrs. Paul Patton of Columbus to wash her car and the youth had a duplicate set of keys made. At the time, Murry admitted, he was out on a "pleasure jaunt."

Anne In Denial Of Press Story

PARIS, May 4—Princess Anne of Bourbon-Parma replied tersely today in answer to inquiries concerning press reports which said she had decided to renounce the Roman Catholic faith to marry King Michael of Romania.

She said: "I learn all kinds of things about myself reading the newspapers."

Beyond this she refused to comment.

The princess, who has been staying in a Paris apartment, revealed that she is leaving the French capital immediately to spend a few days in the country.

Wreck Sheers Top Off Car

COVINGTON, Ky., May 4—Kenton County police held Willis Francis, 22, of Lost Creek today on charges of manslaughter and drunken driving.

They said his light truck, travelling 70 miles an hour, ran over the top of another car, shearing off its roof and killing the driver, Alvin M. Jackson, 23, of London, Ky.

The Kentucky highway patrol reported Francis first sideswiped several cars in Walton, including one driven by Harold Bartels of Dayton, Ohio. The officers said they picked up Francis' trail when he crashed a red traffic light.

New Jersey Blonde Gets Her Man And A Pack Of Legal Troubles

WIESBADEN, May 4—Constance Lundelius, the New Jersey blonde who trailed her German prisoner-of-war boyfriend back to Europe, has finally won her man—and a pack of legal troubles.

The Army newspaper Stars and Stripes says that 20-year-old Connie and Karl Klein, 24, a one-time POW, were married Thursday in Wiesbaden.

For Connie, this was a triumph over boundary lines, oceans, and military government red tape.

She met Karl in the United States. They fell in love, and when Karl was shipped back to his homeland, the Bloomfield, N. J., girl followed him, in an ingenious manner.

She married a British sailor. This got her as far as London, where she divorced the Briton. Shortly afterward she showed up in Karl's hometown, Wiesbaden, in the U. S. zone of Germany.

CONNIE GOT a residence permit, then an identity card, then a waiver permitting her—as a foreigner—to marry a German. But military government officials say that the German civilian authorities had no right to issue the waiver without U. S. approval.

That's where the matter stands now except for two more complicating factors. One is Connie's citizenship. She's still an American until she renounces her citizenship. But under British law, she's a subject of his majesty, George VI, because of her marriage to the sailor.

And since Thursday, when she married Karl, she's a German. The second problem, Stars and Stripes said, is that Connie is expecting a baby in September.

The child's nationality, officials say, will be a three-way toss-up.

Graffis contended in his petition that he was thrown from a caboose and run over when the caboose platform railing collapsed. His legs were crushed and had to be amputated. He also lost the little finger of the right hand.

The suit charged that Graffis had been deprived of the means to support his wife and nine-year-old daughter because of the accident.

The settlement was believed one of the largest personal injury suits in the 93-year history of the district court in Cleveland.

And since Thursday, when she married Karl, she's a German. The second problem, Stars and Stripes said, is that Connie is expecting a baby in September.

The child's nationality, officials say, will be a three-way toss-up.
